

ACT002: Annapurna Base Camp (ABC) Trek - 16 days

Most preferred Trek Route in Nepal.

The Annapurna Base Camp (ABC), this relatively shorter yet famous trek can be planned for any of the suggested trekking months. To begin with, one can fly from Kathmandu to Pokhara or 6 hrs drive. The starting point of the trek is Nayapul (means new bridge in Nepali) after driving an hour from Pokhara you reach there; as you start your trek, you come across a river named Modi and you end-up your trek at ABC which is the starting point of the same river is quite interesting. On the way up, you are accompanied by different trekking groups, mules carrying your food and luggage, porters and guides. You certainly end-up meeting people that you like to talk to or you would never want to see them again. Believing in a step at a time, you reach to Ghorepani, a beautiful Gurung village where nice tea houses with hot shower is available.

In the following morning at 4am, almost everybody at the same time scale-up Poon-hill. If you are ahead of many people, you should turn around once and see the line climbing hill with flash lights on their heads and in hands, it is amazing long line; all are climbing up to see the Annapurna range 360 degree view of rugged hills and ice caps. It feels like the hills and mountains are also waiting to welcome you. On the way back from Trekking, you should never miss the hot-spring at Jhinudanda, There is very nice hot ponds where you can deep yourself to release all the pains you have had during your trek. You can donate some, if you want but it is free for tourists. You can also connect this trip with Annapurna Circuit and make it 26 days. Or you can go for rafting or Jungle Safari to Chitwan or get back to Kathmandu.

We have a recommended itinerary for you; however, this can be modified and changed as per your requirement
